

Senate Is Expected To Follow House In Tax Law Repeal

Quick Passage of Bill in Lower House by Vote of 122 to 72 Comes as Surprise to Its Opponents.

SENATE MAY PASS BILL WITH CHANGE IN DATE

Governor Walker Expresses Confidence Satisfactory Substitute Will Be Passed by Assembly.

Following the vote of the house
of representatives Wednesday in favor of repeal of the tax equalization law,
and with all indications pointing to early concurrence of the senate after a stiff fight, Governor Clifford Walker expressed confidence that the house will now bend its undivided efforts toward providing an adequate substitute for the system it proposes to junk.

The governor made this statement
at a meeting of the League of Women Voters, and while he did not say whether the action of the house was pleasing to him, he appeared optimistic concerning the prospect of passing
an immediate substitute for the tax equalization system if the senate votes for repeal.

New Plan of Taxation.
"I have supreme confidence," the governor remarked to those seated near him after he had delivered an address on the state's taxation problem, "that the legislature, with one spirit and one desire to serve its state,
will proceed without a day's delay to bring forward and adopt a new plan
of taxation if it definitely decides to kill the equalization law. I am also confident in the ability of the general assembly to adopt the tax plan which will be most advantageous to the state
and most acceptable to the tax payers."

Passes 122 to 72.
The house vote was 122 for repeal of the tax equalization law, and 72 against.

The bill now goes to the senate for action. The measure as it passed the house provides that the repeal shall become effective on January 1, 1924.
It was freely predicted in the capitol corridors Wednesday afternoon that the senate will pass the bill with an amendment changing this date to one later, probably January 1, 1926. The house, it is believed, will accept this compromise if necessary to secure passage of the bill.

While the vote of the house came somewhat earlier than had been thought possible, it was entirely in line with the plans outlined on Tuesday night at a caucus of members favoring the repeal. At that time it was agreed to block progress of the house by motions to adjourn until such time as the repeal forces were confident they had sufficient strength on the floor to pass the bill. Leaders of the repealers, finding they had this strength Wednesday, acted immediately.

The debate opened with a vote on a motion made at the close of Tuesday's session for the previous question. This was voted down and a succeeding motion by Howard of Stewart to table the equalization measure was likewise defeated.

Debate Is Started.
Then, after short debate, during which Stewart of Atkinson spoke for the measure, and Jones of Coweta, Langley of Floyd and Howard of Stewart spoke against it, Stovall of Elbert, one of the authors of the bill, sprang a surprise by moving the previous question. His motion was carried and, under the rules of the house, each side was allotted twenty minutes for final debate and the author of the bill also was given twenty minutes to dispose of as he saw fit. This time, after conference

GEORGIA EDITORS SELECT WAYCROSS FOR 1924 SESSION

C. D. Rountree, of The Wrightsville 'Headlight', Is Elected President of Press Association.

BY D. G. BICKERS.
Lawton, Ga., July 18.—(Special.)
After a lively contest between Waycross and West Point, with Rome
asking for a future winter or summer meeting in addition, the Georgia Press association voted in favor of this afternoon of going to the Ware county capital for its 38th annual convention in July, 1924, with an exploratory trip through the Okefenokee
swamp as one of the interesting side-trip features. Officers were elected as follows: C. D. Rountree, of the Wrightsville 'Headlight', president, succeeding W. G. Sutlive, of Savannah; Ernest Camp, of Monroe, first and Miss Emily Woodward, of Vienna,
second vice president; H. M. Stanley, corresponding, and C. E. Bennis, of Butler, recording secretaries; J. J.
Howell, of Cuthbert, treasurer. The retiring president was voted hearty thanks for his administration and a fifty-dollar remembrance; the incoming president made a happy inaugural address.

It was voted to hold a mid-winter meeting, the time and place to be fixed by the incoming executive committee. Invitation from the Southeastern fair to attend on press day, October 12, was referred to the new administration.

John T. Bouffault was elected an honorary member of the association.
In the afternoon session Dr. A. J.
Soule presented the need of trained farm leadership, and W. T. Anderson, of the Macon 'T', proposed a plan which was endorsed for the newspapers to arrange for offering as with the speaker, was divided between Elders of Tattall, Hyman of Washington and Rutherford of Monroe, for the bill, and Steele of De-Kalb and Kempton of Fulton against it.

Representative Elders introduced a

Sufferers Claim Miraculous Cures Through "Faith"

Sensational Scenes Are Enacted at Meeting Held at the Auditorium.

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.
Crutches were thrown away, canes went into the discard, supports and bandages were ripped off, and lame walked, the deaf heard, and other seemingly miraculous things came to pass at the third faith healing meeting conducted by Evangelist Raymond Richey in the city auditorium
Wednesday.

An immense audience of spectators,
some of them frankly skeptical and cynical, climbed on chairs to witness the healing of people who said they suffered from cancer, rheumatism, tuberculosis and other diseases and ailments.
Hundreds joined in the chorus of praise and shouting which came as the religious fervor and enthusiasm
rose to its highest pitch toward the close of the meeting.

Through the tumult and the shouting came the voice of the evangelist inviting other sick and maimed in the hall to come forward and try a "dose of old-time religion."

"Get your eyes on Jesus and put your hand up," was the simple formula that he gave to each man and woman that came up to get healed.

Tubercular Case.
"Oh, I can't get my hand up. You can do nothing for me. I have tuberculosis," said Mrs. J. W. Wilhoit as she was carried on the platform by four men.

"That is true; I can't do anything,
but Jesus can," answered Rev.
Richey.

Someone raised the woman's hand.
Three thousand people waited breathlessly. They waited just for three minutes while the evangelist prayed
and then the woman brightened up and cried: "I feel better."

With that, the shouts of praise
went up with redoubled vigor.
A young girl residing on Central avenue, said to have been suffering
with cancer, was hoisted on the platform. She walked on crutches and said she could not bear her weight on one limb. She cried out after the evangelist laid his hands on her head:
"Oh, it's gone," and promptly threw down her crutches and walked.

Quoted Ancient Monk.
"God is just as strong as He was in the days of Paul," said the preacher. "What is damning the world today is too many churches and too few revivals. The church has lost the power of healing because it has lost touch with God in many instances."

The same words were spoken 500
times.

COMMITTEE ASKS FOR AMENDMENTS IN MARRIAGE LAW

Changes Would Require Ordinary to Post the Names of Prospective Bride and Bridegroom.

PLEA FOR BILL MADE
BY REV. W. H. MAJORS

Senate Adopts by Vote of 41 to 5 Biennial Sessions
Bill—Hot Fight Expected in the House.

Favorable report by senate general judiciary committee No. 1 on the bill
by Senator Stovall, of the Twenty-ninth district, providing for amendment of the present marriage law so as to require county ordinaries to post names of prospective brides and groomsmen on a bulletin board in the courthouse five days prior to issuance of marriage licenses, was returned
when the measure came up for consideration Wednesday afternoon.

The amendment would restrain ordinaries from issuing licenses until both parties have filed a written report showing their age, residence,
whether either had been previously married, whether divorced or separated by annulment or by death, and have furnished other general information. The application for license would be posted in a conspicuous place in the ordinary's office and at the expiration of five days the license
would be issued provided all requirements were found to be as contained in the report.

These provisions, it was pointed out, would serve to check marriages
by minors and marriages in which undivorced persons pose as single men or women.

Favored by Ministers.
Rev. W. H. Majors, pastor of the Georgia Avenue Baptist church, appeared before the committee and spoke in favor of the measure, declaring that the Atlanta Ministerial association was thoroughly in sympathy with such legislation.

Mr. Majors asserted that the present laws governing issuance of marriage licenses were entirely too lenient and should be changed. Posting the names of contracting parties on a public bulletin board five days in advance of issuance of marriage licenses, he declared, would have a tendency to put an end to "sudden marriages,"
which, he stated, were the principal causes for the divorcee.

Senator John R. Phillips' bill providing that property in the state, without lawful owner, shall revert to state ownership, was reported favorably by the education committee of the senate.

Biennial Sessions.
At its morning session, the senate
adopted by a vote of 41 to 5 the bill
by Senator Mundy, of the Thirty-eighth district, providing for a constitutional amendment which would establish biennial sessions of the general assembly of 60 days instead of 50 days
every year as now prevails. The bill is expected to cause a hot fight when it comes up for consideration in the house.

Prior to its passage Senator Mundy
spoke in favor of his measure, declaring that the sentiment of the people of the state is that the general assembly meets too often and squanders too much money.

"There are too many laws and too much money expended at these yearly sessions," declared Senator Mundy.
"Georgia is one of only six states now
having annual sessions, the others
having biennial and quadrennial sessions."

"We could meet every two years for a sixty days' period and transact all
the business necessary for running the state."

Pace Offers Amendment.
Senator Stephen Pace, of the thirty-third district, sought to amend the Mundy measure by changing the biennial session to quadrennial session.

Opposition developed to the bill
from Senator Redwine, of the twenty-sixth district, and Passmore, of the tenth district, both of whom declared that passage of such a measure would require the state to hold numerous extraordinary sessions.

The senate also adopted the bill by Senator Phillips, of the eighteenth district, providing for elimination of fire hazard conditions in public schools of the state. The bill provides that all schools receiving state funds shall be equipped with adequate fire protection, and prevent county school superintendents from disbursing funds to any school failing to comply with requirements of the act.

Poolroom Bill.
A bill providing for rigid regulations of poolrooms was introduced by Senator Spence, of the eighth district.
The measure was introduced by quid to furnish a $1,000 bond insuring observance of all restrictions regarding operation of such establishments, which, according to the measure, would be inspected regularly by sheriffs of the counties in which they are located.

Under provisions of the bill licenses
would be granted only to American citizens who have not been convicted of a felony and who promise to ban
gambling in their establishments.

An invitation extended to the senate
to attend a barbecue at Dalton, next Saturday as guests of the 1-mpkin county commissioners was accepted with thanks.

Empress Carlotta, Dying, BROKEN, INSANE, SHE STILL LIVES IN GLORIOUS PAST Awaits Young Maximilian

Brussels, July 18.—Behind the shuttered windows of Chateau de Beuchet an 83-year-old woman, dying, insane, is living in the memories of her glorious past.

Stark mad since 1867, her broken
mind does not know that she is old,
an exile; her failing eyes do not see the flat green fields of Belgium, and the stone chateau that has been her prison these many years.

Empress Carlotta, widow of Emperor Maximilian of Mexico, she is still—to herself—the empress of Mexico. Somewhere, beyond the portals of the rooms that shut her in, young Maximilian, her emperor husband, she believes, is waiting, and will come to her.

King Albert of Belgium, her nephew, hurried to her bedside Wednesday night when physicians reported that she might die at any moment. To her he was but another official of her court.

Through the death watches she cried always for her husband who,
they had told her, had "gone away."

Fate Has Been Kind
Fate has, perhaps, been kind to Carlotta, frail relic of 19th century
dynasties long since faded into history.
Since that burning dawn of June 19,
1868, when rebel Mexican troops shot
Maximilian against a wall in Mexico,
her mind has lived only in the past.
She has no knowledge of the days that followed, of her wanderings throughout Europe, her virtual imprisonment as a lunatic, the days of the world war whose thunders reached her windows without her knowing their significance. To her the night
"that Mexico rose in rebellion" is "yesterday." She is still empress, and her husband will return.

The story of Carlotta, "The Mad Empress," goes back beyond the memory of this generation. Born in Belgium in 1840, she wed the handsome and dashing Archduke Maximilian, of Austria, and went with him to the gay court of Vienna where her youth and beauty made her a leader in its life.

"When Napoleon III of France,
"Napoleon the Little," dreamed of an empire in the new world and began his war on Mexico, he selected Maximilian as the ruler of his new empire.

France Backed Project
Together they came to Mexico, and,
surrounded by European courtiers,
set up a gilded and regal regime.
France backed the project with money
and men.

The civil war was in progress in America. When it ended, however,
the United States announced that it could not permit imperial adventures
in the western hemisphere. France saw the north equipped with a standing army of 1,000,000 civil war veterans, ready to fight. Napoleon III, busy on his own European war ventures, left Maximilian to work out his own destiny as best he might.

Bloody revolution followed. General Benito Juarez, victorious, captured Maximilian and decreed that he must die. Maximilian was stood up against a wall in the Mexican village of Queretaro and fell before the volley of a firing squad.

Escape to Europe.
Almost simultaneously the princess escaped to Europe, despite the fact that rebel warships followed in hot pursuit. She arrived in Paris alone, weeping and disconsolate. She hurried to Napoleon and later to Rome,
where she was received by Pope Pius IX.

Then she declared that poison food
was being fed her and insisted on drinking out of the Pope's cup at meals. Physicians were summoned, whereat she refused to leave the vatican. Driven insane by worry, she insisted on spending the night there,
establishing the record of having been
the only woman in history to do so.

Later she was taken to Belgium
and placed under guard in the Chateau. A small court was placed at her disposal, its members being instructed to honor her in her belief
that she was still empress of Mexico.
The grim racial force has been continued until this day.

Princess Carlotta is immensely
wealthy, her estate being estimated at $700,000. This will fall to the royal family of Belgium on her death.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY
Baffles Police

Kansas City, Mo., July 18.—Mrs.
Eula Thompson, employee in a local undertaking establishment, and her employer, W. M. McClure, were found dead in the undertaking parlors early today. Circumstances attending their deaths are baffling police.

Mrs. Thompson's death is attributed to a fall of two stories down an elevator shaft.

McClure's body was found, a long post mortem knife buried in the chest, shortly after he had instructed
a negro porter to call doctors to aid Mrs. Thompson. The body was stretched upon an undertaker's slab.

McClure was 55 years old and married. Mrs. Thompson was 30 years old.

Fred Webb, a negro janitor, told
the police that when he returned to work at the undertaker's rooms, early today, he found McClure heading over Mrs. Thompson's body at tar-bottom of the elevator shaft.

"She has fallen down the shaft,"
the negro quoted McClure as saying. McClure ordered him to call physicians, the negro said, after he said and McClure had carried the woman's body from the shaft. Two physicians arrived and examined the body. Mc-Clure left when they arrived. When the doctors asked to see the proprietor of the establishment, a search was started, which culminated with the discovery of McClure's body in the morgue.

The door to the elevator shaft was found to have been left open. Blood was on the shaft.

Believed Suicide.
After an examination of the bodies
and cursory investigation, Dr. H. E.
Moss, deputy coroner, asserted as theory to be that McClure discovered with the body, had been unweary-ing by the possibility that he might be confronted by murder charges, and had taken his own life in preference to facing an ordeal.

McClure, he said, probably was in the second story where coffins are stored, when Mrs. Thompson went to him to summon him to the office.
Returning, the deputy coroner assumed, she fell down the shaft.

Investigation so far has not revealed that any other person besides McClure and Mrs. Thompson was in the building when Mrs. Thompson's death occurred.

McClure is survived by his widow,
an invalid, and two daughters.

CITY OF WAYCROSS
PLANS CREMATORY

Waycross, Ga., July 18.—The city of Waycross is preparing to erect a new crematory on a thirteen-acre tract
just outside of the city limits. According to an announcement by Commissioner C. V. Stanton. The deal for the land was consummated last week,
and work on the new crematory is expected to begin at once.

RUHR OCCUPATION HARDLY SUCCESS, SAYS SULLIVAN

Disruption of Germany Is Really Only Thing Accomplished by French,
Declares Observer.

STRANGE DEVELOPMENT
MAY SOON OCCUR THERE

Possibility of Communists
Taking Over Factories and Operating Them on Communist Basis Is Discussed.

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

London, July 17.—Britain says
that the Ruhr occupation, besides being illegal, is not a success. France says she could make it a success if Britain would join her in forcing Germany to cease resistance, and that she will make it a success anyhow if given time.

As in most arguments between present facts and future expectations
present facts have the best of it.
And the present fact is that the Ruhr occupation most certainly is not a success so far as exacting reparations is concerned, and can be regarded as a success only if by success is meaning bringing about the disruption of Germany.

France publishes statistics showing an increasing production of goods in the Ruhr factories, though admitting that the present production is only about 25 per cent of normal. All statistics on conditions in Germany
are out of date before they are compiled. But you do not need statistics
when on a week day forenoon you look out across iron works as big as those at Bethlehem and see not one human being in sight, not one car or piece of machinery in motion,
nor when you see scores of acres of railroad tracks and switches as big as those at the Pennsylvania terminal at Jersey City and not one car
in motion but every track rusty, nor when you see stalks of wheat three feet high growing out of a railroad
cut that must have stood at one spot
since early spring, nor when you see beds of huge weeds growing between the tracks.

Rail Operation Not Normal.
Railroad operation in the Ruhr by the French is not anything like 25 per cent of normal. A British labor leader who is a practical railroad man and has examined the Ruhr, told me that it would take 100,000 skilled French railroad men working steadily
for one year to restore the Ruhr railroad operation to normal.

The Ruhr occupation is most certainly not a success so far as producing goods for reparations is concerned. On the contrary, the real result of the Ruhr occupation is increasing resistance and the vicious circle of violence is bringing on counter violence.

The French army conducts the occupation in a much less skillful spirit than the British. You see German men and women of the highest class who wish to travel ten miles standing, but in hand, before a French soldier who hes the power to withhold permission for the journey and loots around with studied insolence on the railroad station bench.

Senegalese Withdrawn.
Some months ago Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, in the senate,
charged the presence of black troops in the Rhineland. Clemenceau was then in America and he joined other French authorities in a denial. The denial can only be explained through use of the phrase "The Senegalese units have been withdrawn." It appears true that no full Senegalese regiment is now in the Rhineland, but there are thousands of colored soldiers in the so-called Moroccan colonial regiments.

These regiments seem composed of strange hybrids, running from what looks like pure white to what is most certainly pure black. They may not be Senegalese but they are what any citizen of Georgia, U. S. A. means by black or colored. I saw hundreds of such troops, and American news-
papersmen and others permanently
stationed in the Ruhr and the Rhineland told me they had seen thousands
within the past two weeks.

Senator Stanley of Kentucky arrived at Cologne as I left and is spending some time traveling through the Ruhr. As one who has spent his life in Kentucky and Washington, he knows colored soldiers when he sees them and should be able to report the facts.

Without trying to understand the recondite ethnological distinctions in the French official denial, it is readily possible that all those who want the exact facts and figures about the presence of colored troops in occupied Germany can get them from the correspondents of American papers stationed in the Ruhr.

Committee Votes For Restoration Of Pension Limits

M'MICHAEL BILL
ON HIGHWAY FUNDS
BELIEVED DOOMED

General Opinion, Expressed
at Capitol, Is That Legislators Will Make Short Work of Measure.

That the death knell of the bill
of Representative McMichael of Marion, which would provide for re-apportionment of highway funds and effect drastic changes in the present system of road building in Georgia,
was struck when adverse by the house committee on highways Tuesday night, was the current opinion
at the capitol Wednesday.

Considerable comment centered about the bill and the committee's action as the result of the declaration by Chairman Turner, of Brooks, that an official of the federal bureau of public roads had made it known that passage of the measure would be met with a recommendation from the bureau that the federal government discontinue participation in road building in Georgia.

This development caused sentiment
about the legislature Wednesday to be practically solid in the opinion that the house would make short work of the bill when reported by the committee, and under no circumstances would do anything to jeopardize the annual federal-aid appropriation of approximately $2,000,000.

Only Way To Get Return
"This is our only way to get a return on Georgia taxes paid to the federal government," Chairman Turner said Wednesday. "I can hardly believe that any member of the house or of the entire assembly could have the hardihood to insist upon the state
taking a course that would endanger a $2,000,000 fund yearly which is handed over to Georgia to help in the balance paid into the treasury,
which the state meets the perfectly reasonable provisions of the federal government."

The committee's action in reporting the bill was believed to be a

Plan To Restore Seven Inspectors To Jobs Vetoed

Mayor Asks Sanitary Committee to Select Men to Be Dropped.

Vetoing the resolution of council
restoring seven discharged sanitary inspectors to their former positions, and stating that the sanitary committee had no right to authorize Chief John

?Why the Weather?

DR. CHARLES F. BROOKS
Secretary American Meteorological Society, Describes:

The Motor in a Thunderstorm.

An automobile is not the safest place to be in during a thunderstorm. The rubber tires, which in dry weather very efficiently insulate a car from the ground against an ordinary electrical charge, offer
no appreciable protection against the enormous potential and violence of lightning. This is not the real hazard of the automobile, however, in a thunderstorm. The danger comes either in the open or when a car is parked beneath a tall tree or close to a wire fence.
The latter is a real source of danger, for it can carry a deadly current a long distance from the point
where the bolt struck it.

The wise thing for the motorist
to do in a thunderstorm is to stop,
if possible, somewhere below the general level of the ground, away from tall trees or a wire fence. A spot where the road cuts between high banks would be as good as any.

Return.

Hearing Date Set For Men Charged With Girl's Death

Waycross, Ga., July 18.—(Special.)—The preliminary hearing in the case of J. F. Barber and Marcus B. Norris, charged with the death of Mrs. Nellie Price, of Cordele, will be held at 9 o'clock Monday morning at the Ware county court house, with Judge Wilbur Sweet, of Waycross, Judge Dave Leggett, of Milwood, and Judge C. W. Wilson, of Bickley, presiding.

Relatives of the dead girl announced several days ago that they were preparing to prosecute the case to the limit of the law, and ending preliminary procedure, the two accused men have been detained in the Ware county jail.

It is understood here that relatives of the girl believe that she was brutally murdered and are preparing to make efforts to connect Barber and Norris with her death.

The prosecuting attorney, Allen B. Spence, will be assisted in the prosecution of the case by Wilson and Bennett of Waycross, and Judge Marcus Land, Col. Jake Jetter, of Cordele. The defendants will be represented by McDonald and Willingham, of Douglas.

Interest in the case which was intense at the time of the finding of the body some ten days ago, has been increased by the activities of the prosecution. Bert Cain, brother-in-law of the dead girl, stated upon his arrival from his home in Cordele to take charge of the investigation, that the relatives of the dead girl were confident that she had been brutally murdered.

Mr. Cain stated further that he believed that the girl was killed before the train struck her, and that the apparent accident was nothing more than an attempt to hide the crime.

The defendants have been refusing to discuss the case since being confined in the local jail, although they were alleged to have claimed before being arrested in Douglas that the girl lost her head at the approach of the light and the noise of the approaching engine, and stepped in front of the train.

Officials See Hope Of Bergdoll Returning
To Serve Sentence

Washington, July 18.—A possibility that Grover Cleveland Bergdoll may voluntarily return to the United States and serve a prison sentence for evading the draft is seen by some officials here as a result of recent conferences with the Bergdoll attorneys.

Hope of such a development is based upon a supposition that at least some of the Bergdoll property taken over by the government during the war might be returned should the fugitive give himself up. The restoration law passed at the last session of congress contains a clause said to have been inserted to cause the Bergdoll case in particular, specifying that none of the property held by the alien property custodian shall be turned back to its former owner so long as he is under sentence for violation of the draft law. When Mrs. Emma Bergdoll recently applied for a passport to visit her son in Europe her lawyers are said to have indicated that she would use her influence to have him serve out his five-year sentence.

prizes scholarships to boys and girls in the State College of Agriculture. A. J. Connell, of Lavana, president of the Georgia Co-operative Cotton association, spoke briefly upon the need of a better marketing system in the state for products of the farm and truck gardens. He declared that with a better marketing system the road question, school question and tax problems of the state would all be of easy solution.

End 1923 Session.
The annual convention of the Georgia Press association was concluded here tonight with the presentation of a stunt program at the auditorium before a capacity audience.

The last word in the presentation of the press meeting's program, as one said, was today the woman's hour, arranged and presided over by Miss Emily Woodward, of Vienna, third vice-president. The program indicated the extent, the ambitions, the influence of women in the newspaper business in Georgia.

Mrs. Edna Cain Daniel, of Quitman, was the only one scheduled to be on the program, who was absent—and a wire was authorized sent to Royal Daniel and Edna Cain Daniel expressing sincere regret of the association that the ill health of the former prevented their attendance. Mrs. Angus Perkinson, of The Journal, Mrs. McCord Roberts, of The Georgian, Miss Myrick, the food expert of The Macon Telegraph, and Mrs. Bryan, of the Covington paper, were exponents in papers of their respective work, and Miss Mary Singleton, society editor of The Tri-County Advertiser, the youngest member of the association, who is now just thirteen years old, read the brightest paper heard on "What I Hope to Be in the Newspaper Business."

She declared she hoped to have the wit and wisdom, the manner and methods, the virtues and the good looks of a dozen Georgia editors and gave a composite picture thus of a wonderful combination.

Tribute to Wives.
Concluding the woman's program, President Sutlive spoke and John Boileau, of Macon, paid a high tribute in his eloquent way to the "wives of Georgia editors."

The old south was first and last on the morning program. Admiral A. R. Wright, of Alabama, gallant officer in the Confederate navy, appeared on behalf of his effort, a work he had been doing for several years, to revive from oblivion the names and records of the six thousand sailors and officers of the Confederate navy. He said that all the records of the army have been preserved, but that the records of the navy were destroyed when Richmond fell and have never been collected and compiled. Legislation of all the southern states have been asked to make legal the work of collecting such data for the archives.

Editors of Georgia went on record to aid in his work by calling for names and records of the 500 officers and men from Georgia who served in the southern naval forces. One suggestion was made that it possible, the southern sailor be also brought out prominently in some fitting manner in the Stone Mountain monument, which shows the southern soldier.

The program of the morning closed with a talk by Sculptor Borglum, who is doing the colossal monument at Stone Mountain. Briefly, he outlined the genesis and the genius of the eighth wonder of the world. Georgia editors will aid in the movement to bring this gigantic work to completion.

"Some questions at issue in the war between the states, particularly the question of the rights of the states, are quite as important today as they were at that time," declared Borglum.

Cannot Be Ignored.
"The story of the Confederacy," he said, "is an integral part of the history of the United States. It cannot be ignored or effaced. It must be preserved. The principles for which the men of the south fought and the women of the south suffered constitute the greater reason for this incomparable monument which we propose to erect in their memory. And be it said to the credit of the north that people there have manifested very genuine interest in the enterprise and are standing ready to assist it financially and in every other way."

"The importance of the monument does not lie primarily in its magnitude, though that is greater than the magnitude of any other work of this kind in all history."

"Its importance lies in its historical truth and its artistic merit. We cannot expect the world to come see this memorial because of its magnitude, unless it is secured in an artistic merit the works of Greece and Italy, we ought not to erect it."

Georgia Leads Way.
"Whatever Georgia does, other states of the south will do. Of that we have no doubt. That is the message I would bring to you today—to inspire your readers to a realization that Georgia leads the way."

Mr. Borglum arrived here this morning by train from Atlanta and spent the day with the Georgia editors, meeting many of them personally and receiving a reception which indicated the enthusiastic interest and genuine interest in the great enterprise of which he is the genius and guiding spirit.

Without an exception the editors assured him of their readiness to give the memorial their whole-hearted support, and many of them announced their intention of going to Stone Mountain to observe the progress of the work and see the pictures put on the precipice at night.

The "press agent" who for fees undertakes to serve advertisers and pass publicity along to the newspapers, accompanied by alleged news service or otherwise, came in for unanimous condemnation in a resolution which was passed with a whip following the report of the special committee named at the winter meeting to investigate the methods of the "space grafter."

Discard "Graft" Copy.
A resolution was adopted condemning the practice of serving the press agent free and pledging the association as a whole and individually to throwing in the waste basket or returning to the client of the press bureau all such matter sent for free publication.

The committee, headed by Milton Fleetwood, of Cartersville, was continued in service. A resolution also was passed dividing the annual dues of $4, $3 to go for dues and $1 as subscription to The Georgia Publisher, organ of the association, to give that monthly paper a bona fide paid up subscription list.

John Paschal reported that work assigned him to obtain a printing press for the Berry schools near Rome had progressed, more than $800 having been subscribed and paid. As much more is to be raised. The association is to present an $1,800 press to the school.

The people of Lavana were host to the convention at a bounteous barbecue today, there being several hundred in all, hosts and guests and visiting friends from half a dozen nearby towns enjoying the feast in the grove. After the meal Justice Marcus Beck, of the supreme court, spoke briefly to the newspaper people.

Tonight was staid night at the auditorium. The editors and their friends had a good time with songs and sketches, dialogues and monologues, surprising stunts that nobody but newspaper folk assembled ever thought of, fake presentations of loving cups which shattered to pieces on the stage, frame-up scraps between members with the local police intervening to avoid bloodshed, speeches from persons who were not called upon, and calls for speeches from persons a thousand miles away.

The party in six Pullman coaches, more than 250 in number, leaves Lavana for Cordele and the Tallulah Falls early tomorrow morning to spend two days in the real mountains and valleys.

McCartney Talks.
Lavana, Ga., July 18.—Georgia newspapers are "more generous" to others than just to themselves, John D. McCartney, assistant to the president of the Central of Georgia Railway company, told members of the Georgia Press association Tuesday in urging the smaller papers to adopt better business administration.

"It goes without saying that such handling will make the community all the more valuable both to the seller and buyer. Modern business is scientific and science does not speculate to a conclusion—science knows. Yet the publisher is perhaps the only business man who goes on year after year selling something that he does not know what it costs to produce."

Promptness in billing, accuracy in measurement and computation of space and a strict following of instructions were urged by the speaker as some of the things each publisher would find approved by his patrons. For the larger offices, he advocated a cost-finding system, and for the smaller ones, adequate client help, supplied with filing systems, books and records which compose systematic business.

"Space Graft" War.
Definite progress has been made in the war the Georgia Press Association in February declared on "space grafters," according to the report of a special committee.

To a man, practically every one of those who had patronized the space grafter, paying him in a number of instances, hundreds of dollars, wrote your chairman that they had misunderstood the situation, thanked us for the letters written and assured us they would in the future co-operate with the press, instead of furnishing ammunition to our ranker enemies."

La Follette Says 'Old Lincoln Spirit' Is Sweeping West

Madison, Wis., July 18.—Senator Robert M. La Follette, in a statement issued in connection with the election of Magnus Johnson as United States senator to succeed the late Knute Nelson over Governor J. A. O. Preus, of Minnesota, declared that "the old Lincoln spirit is again sweeping the west. It will find its echo in the east, south and middle-west just as soon as court-ageous and able leaders of the type of Magnus Johnson arise to champion the cause of the common people."

He said the election of Mr. Johnson does not merely express sectional protest of disgruntled farmers and working men. "The voice of Minnesota is the voice of the common people, who are determined to free themselves from the monopoly of power over their lives... they have learned to know the real enemies of their political and economical liberty."

"Governor Preus had the support of all the reactionary force not merely of Minnesota, but also of the nation. It was well known that if elected he would have followed reactionary leadership in the senate and enlisted in the service of organized monopoly which was supporting him."

"Magnus Johnson took the people's side in this struggle. I am confident that he will demonstrate the same high courage, ability and steadfastness in the public service which he exhibited in the campaign just closed."

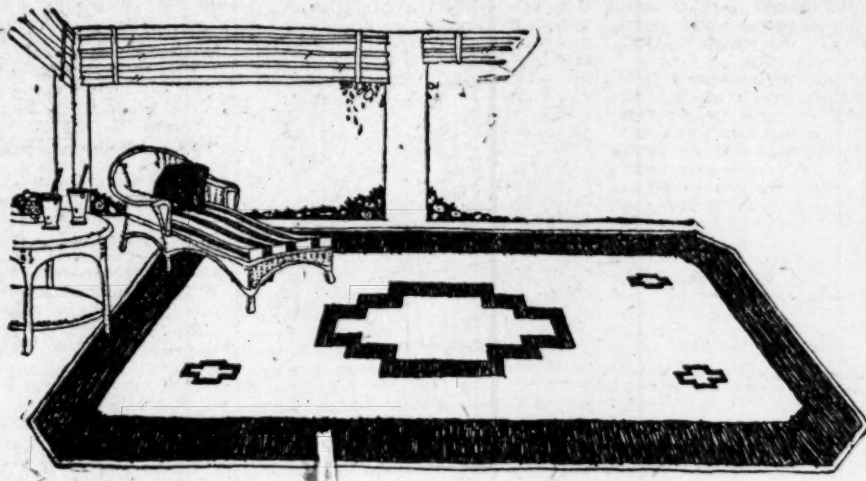

"Emancipation of the American people from monopoly control is still the dominant issue. It will be the one paramount issue until the people are freed from that control."

"The power which has been built up in defiance of law and with the active aid of the government at Washington is doomed when a majority of the people, as in Minnesota, take back the control of their own government."

Charges Husband Traded Their Son For Horse and Buggy

Shreveport, La., July 18.—Mrs. Arthur Maury complained to the district attorney's office here today that her husband had traded their 14-month-old son to an unidentified man for a horse and buggy and then sold the outfit for $20. She appealed to the authorities to assist her to recover "the child."

Hand of Death Halts Romance Of Little Girl

New York, July 18.—Mike Russo is a Roman, but only a barber in a "rag" shop down around Thompson street in New York's East Side Italian center. He thinks Romeo and Juliet is just a cigar.

Being a Roman, he had his opinion of Sicilian and therefore little Italy mourns his daughter, Madeline, age 14.

Madeline and her romance must have twanged the imagination of the whole settlement. She was so young and so pretty. In the smelly streets of Little Italy she seemed to have much in common with a wild rose stifling in a flower pot on a tenement fire escape.

Madeline went to her father, Mike, some months ago, told him she loved Steve Ramelli, and asked permission to marry him. There was quite a storming threat. Madeline was only 14 and too young. But she pointed out, other girls marry at 14 in Little Italy. Well, anyway this Steve was a Sicilian and therefore no good. No, she couldn't marry Steve.

Madeline disappeared. She and Steve were found living together. Mike, the father, tried a stratagem. He sent word that it would be all right. They were to meet him at the license bureau. They walked into a trap. Steve was arrested for abduction. Madeline was taken into custody as a witness against him and sent to the home maintained by the Children's society on Fifth avenue.

At night, with a key obtained no matter how, Madeline opened the grating on the window of her room in the home, tossed out a rope of knotted sheets, took a hitch around a bed-post and began to lower herself to the street.

Across Fifth avenue in the shadows stood an automobile, the motor humming softly. Madeline started down and under hand, lost her grip, let go and landed with a smash.

The car sped off, leaving the dark form on the sidewalk.

She was dead.

Mother Is Denied Custody of Child By Court Order

Los Angeles, Calif., July 18.—Superior Judge Leslie Howitt tonight awarded the custody of five-year-old Ju. PLAN TO RESTORE INSPECTORS' VETO

cause of a sharp controversy ever since the sheet was introduced in council. After finally adopting it without provision for the inspectors, council, the aldermanic board concurring, Monday passed a resolution by Councilman Pennington making special provision for the inspectors on the ground that the health of the city needed the additional protection. The sentiment generally expressed in council was that the responsibility for the cut should be put squarely up to the mayor.

"I've got the backbone to take the responsibility if no one else has," Mayor Sims declared Wednesday afternoon in signing his veto message. "A new system is now being promulgated in this department, and if it is found satisfactory, the department will not need as many men as heretofore employed," he said in his veto message. "I have talked with the chief of this department and he is of the opinion that the new system should be tried out and if it is satisfactory, he agrees with me that the number of men heretofore used will not be needed."

"Personally, I would like very much to see the men who were left off, or least some of them, restored to their former positions, for I believe that seniority, where character and efficiency are equal, should be regarded in promoting men in any department."

Eight inspectors retained by Chief Jentzen began work Wednesday morning on horseback. The ninth man, in the business district, continued to make his rounds on foot.

Women Voters Hear Discussion Of Tax Problems

Governor Clifford Walker and Dr. J. H. T. McPherson, head of the political science and history department of the University of Georgia, were principal speakers Wednesday at the first of a series of meetings to be held by the League of Women Voters during the session of the present legislature. Governor Walker discussed general needs of tax reform in Georgia, and Dr. McPherson advocated adoption of a classification instead of an income tax to meet this demand.

Governor Walker pointed out the fact that under the present system of taxation, the burden of maintaining the state government and its institutions is not justly distributed.

"People everywhere want to see the system now in vogue killed and a fair plan inaugurated," he declared.

Dr. McPherson declared that an income tax would require a highly centralized system of collection and added the opinion that a classification tax would be better suited to the needs of the state.

"It will be years before Georgia is educated to the income tax," he stated. "If she should adopt an income tax system patterned after that of the federal government, with similar exemptions and surcharges, one-fifth of the state's population would have to shoulder the burden of taxation."

"Western states which have taken the income tax system up have met with this difficulty and recognize the fact that a certain class is overburdened. A classification tax is a form of income tax; is much simpler, and would meet the demands of the state and come much nearer being acceptable to the mass of taxpayers."

The next meeting of the league will be held July 25, when Speaker Neill, of the house, and former Governor Hugh M. Dorsey will speak on "The State—How the Wheels Go Round." On August 1 Miss Rhoda Kaufman, secretary of the state welfare board, and Dr. Preston, of the Institute for the Feeble Minded, will speak on "How Georgia Saves the Pieces." The series of meetings is being held at the Capital City club.

Hibernians Are Urged To Begin Campaign Against Ku Klux Klan

Montreal, July 18.—The most important task in which the Ancient Order of Hibernians could engage at present is wide exposure of the Ku Klux Klan, President James Deery declared today in his annual report at the order's convention.

After a sweeping attack on the Klan, Deery declared that religious tolerance was the keystone of liberty in Canada and the United States and asserted that the public should endow chairs of tolerance in all the universities of the continent.

Catarrh

ZONITE is a perfected form of the world-famous Carrel-Dakin solution. Clinical and laboratory tests with this new form of antiseptic have developed methods of antiseptics and healing unknown a few years ago.

These tests show Zonite to be an effective agent in overcoming nasal catarrh. The method is as follows: Secure an atomizer in which the fittings are of hard rubber. Make a solution of one teaspoonful of Zonite to three-fourths of a glass of lukewarm water. Tilt the head well back and spray through a nostril until the liquid can be felt dripping from the post nasal cavity into the throat. Repeat the process through the other nostril.

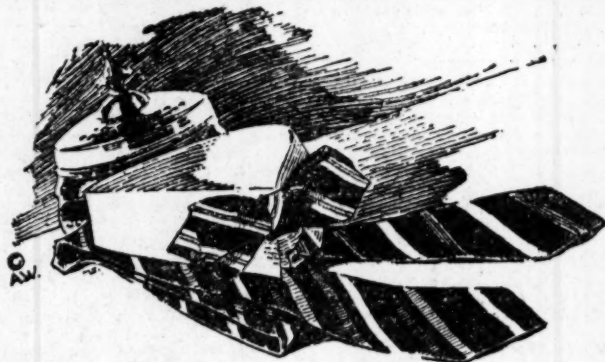

This treatment should be employed three times daily—morning, evening and before retiring. The solution should not be allowed to stand in the atomizer, but should be freshly prepared each day. As the mucous membrane becomes accustomed to the sensation of the antiseptic the amount of water may be reduced until not over a half a glass is used to each teaspoonful of Zonite.

The above treatment should provide a feeling of comfort and relief within a few hours. In from two to four weeks it should cleanse and heal the mucous membrane, check all abnormal discharge and clear the nasal passages.

Note: A more copious flow of mucus after spraying is to be expected; it will soon disappear.

NOTICE

TO THE UNCONCERNED:

The old-time Revival and Gospel of Healing meetings at the Auditorium conducted by the Raymond T. Richey Evangelistic party are attracting state-wide attention.

Already a large number of people have come from outside of the city to attend these meetings and to have their bodies healed by faith in the power of the Lord.

Several have received their healing and will give their testimonies from the platform.

If you will but come, you will be convinced that the work of the Lord is clearly manifested and that He is given all the glory.

"This is not a committee-made nor a man-made revival, but a revival prayed right down out of Heaven," Evangelist Richey says. That is why it is attracting so much attention. It will be worth your while to attend these meetings.

GEORGIA GOLFERS GETTING READY FOR TOURNEY

To Play Qualifying Rounds Today at Idle Hour Country Club; Play Finals Saturday

Approximately 30 Golfers From Atlanta Are Entered in Tourney—Many Practice Rounds Yesterday With Good Scores.

BY CLIFF WHEATLEY.
Sports Editor of The Constitution.
Macon, Ga., July 18.—(Special.) The man who wins the Georgia golf championship in the test that gets under way here at the Idle Hour Country club bright and early Thursday morning is going to have to shoot considerable golf for the course is not what this correspondent would pick for something easy.

More than a hundred golfers have already reached Macon and have registered for the big event. This means that the list is certain to mount to close to 150 entries at starting time, officials declare. Scores of Macon golfers who have been doing nothing more than mangle their way among those present when the festivities start.

Atlanta, as was expected, has the highest delegation. Thirty golfers from the big city have already arrived, and Lowry Arnold, president of the Georgia State Amateur Golfers' association, declares many amateurs from Atlanta will appear in ample time to tee off for the big dogs.

Atlanta's Practice.
Capital City entries held the center of interest in the practice rounds this afternoon. Central figures in this center of interest, if you follow us, was none other than Veasy Rainwater, a former Georgia amateur championship player, who showed the way to the rest of the field with a magnificent 76, which figure is far better than was turned in by any other entry, unless we bring young Richard Hickey into the discussion. Richard was three strokes behind Veasy, but the two were so far ahead of the other contestants there was little comparison.

Veasy was playing in a foursome with Chick Ridley, Tess Bradshaw and a Macon entry, whose name this correspondent neglected to ascertain. Chick's stockings are as good as even in fact this new pair, black with a splendid assortment of yellow spangles dotting the general effect, overshadowed anything he has yet seen. Chick's stockings are as good as even in fact this new pair, black with a splendid assortment of yellow spangles dotting the general effect, overshadowed anything he has yet seen.

Taking his own word for the round, we are forced to announce that Mr. Chick Ridley found this course hard enough a plenty. He has fallen in love with number nine, regarded by many as one of the real test-holes and has not failed to turn in a three at this station, despite the fact that he has negotiated this ninth hole at least six times in the two days he has been

HOOVER DENIES ENTERING REGATTA

New York, July 18.—Walter Hoover, Duluth oarsman, who lost his title to the diamond sculls when he was eliminated in the first heat at the English Henley regatta because of a broken oar, professed ignorance of plans for his entry in the national regatta at Baltimore August 3 and 4, upon his return from abroad today on the Olympic.

The Duluth boat club, of which Hoover is a member, announced a few days ago that he would compete in the single sculls, opposing Paul Costello, of Philadelphia, the present national title holder. It also was said Hoover would go to one to Baltimore to begin training, but the oarsman he intended to depart at once for his home. He did not say whether he would arrange to come east again for the Baltimore regatta.

Hoover added that he was ready to race Costello, however, at any time on the former's home course at Duluth.

Tess was having some trouble off the test and turned in an 82. He appeared to be completely satisfied with the figure and had no hesitancy in announcing that he would like to hang it up and let the first fighters shoot at it.

Have Good Rounds.
Lowry Arnold, "Little Billy" Jones, Veasy Rainwater and Dana Belser are among the Duluth stars who have been in the tussle and had very good rounds today.

"Little Billy" was just above 80 and even had work from the tees on several holes failed to keep Colonel Arnold and Belser from reporting scores that, if repeated in the qualifying test, can hardly miss getting their owners into the championship fight.

Lewy Arnold and T. T. Williams, who are to be on the outfit Atlanta Park will send after the team trophy were other Atlantans who went over the course.

The Atlanta Athletic club will be represented by four of the stars who are added to low scoring at East Lake.

Test Bradshaw is one and has already displayed some fine stuff; Chick Ridley is another East Lake crack who is certain to do a lot of great shooting in the qualifying round.

Charlie Black Jr., completes a lineup from the Atlanta Athletic club that will be mighty hard to stop for team trophy. Virtually the same team won last year and is very anxious to repeat. Competition for this cup will be one of the big features of the opening day.

Course Is Difficult.
Critics who know lots about the Idle Hour course and those who reached the scene of action today are convinced that comparatively big scores will land safely in

CRACKERS TAKE DOUBLE-HEADER FROM BIRMINGHAM

Phil Morrison Has the Best Of King Brady in Opener; Bennie Karr Wins Second

Both Games Won by 2 to 1 Score—Johnny Ring Proves to Be Star in Both Contests—Play in Chattanooga Today.

Birmingham, Ala., July 18.—After winning 12 out of 13 games from the Barons, the Crackers heaped the marginal straw on the weakening camel's back Wednesday afternoon at Rickwood, when they won both games of their double-header 2 to 1. Thereby increasing the casualty list from 12 to 14.

It was the fact that the Crackers won two games from the Barons that was the worst part of the afternoon's disaster. When Phil Morrison, the object of many Barons' fans' raving, who was dumped onto the Atlanta club a couple of weeks ago in a trade, came back and gave the Barons six scattered hits and beat them until their humiliation was almost complete. Not quite, however, for facing "Big Phil" was King Brady, the pitcher that the Barons got in their trade for Morrison. This was the finished touch on the masterpiece arranged for the Barons by Otto Miller, the Crackers manager.

Morrison Effect.
Although the Barons opened up like they intended to send "Big Phil" to the showers in short order, they were more or less helpless before him after the first, when they had a man on second and third with one man down and failed to score. Morrison was tight in the pinches and the Barons could do little more than hit to the infield.

Playing behind Phil in big league style and encouraging him was Danny Clark, another Barons cast-off, who was sold to Atlanta along with Morrison. Danny played a great game of ball. He took three put-outs and made eight assists without error. Many of the balls snatched by the former Barons were of the clean hit variety, especially one sizzling grounder from Robertson's bat.

As for King Brady, he pitched good ball, but was not in Phil's class in Wednesday afternoon's game. He could not show Morrison's effectiveness in the pinches and three hits were gotten off him in the fourth which accounted for the first run in the eighth, which accounted for the other run.

Sumpter Clarke played a big game in the field. Seven Crackers hit long flies which he got under four put-outs. His throws held runners on the base when slower work would have allowed them to advance.

Karr Beats Stewart.
In the second game Karr got the big end of his duel with Walker Stewart. The lone Barons run was given up by him on a wild pitch that allowed Clark to come in from third. The Barons looked weak in the other innings.

Stewart could not keep his hits scattered and in the sixth and seventh innings he allowed an extra base hit and a single to come together and on each occasion a man scored. Karr tied up the game in the sixth when he hit a terrific drive to the Southern league score board which missed clearing the wall by about two feet. He stopped at second but scored a moment later when Eddie Moore drove a grounder past Brausen, which was followed by another grounder between his legs from the bat of King. Karr scored on Ring's grounder.

In the seventh it looked like the game would end in a tie. Umpire "Steamboat" Johnson had announced that the game would be called at 9 o'clock to allow the Crackers to catch a train, and they had two men down in their half of the seventh and a very little time left to play in. It was then that Mohardt came to the bat and hit a long drive to left field that looked like an easy homer. Fast footwork by Clarke held Mohardt at third but it was a useless effort, for Brock, after a short consultation with Manager Miller, drove a clean single through second and Mohardt stroled home. The Barons went out in order.

Get Good Start.
Stewart's clan opened auspiciously in the field in the second game by ending the first three innings for the Crackers in pretty double-plays. Hartford started the series in the first when he snaggled. Killing's fast grounder got Ring at second and the batter at first. In the next inning Walter Stewart started the double and Hartford worked in the hub position. Burke and Danny Clark fell. The third of the series came in the third and the Hartford, J. Stewart-Neun combination was again working. Brock and Karr were the victims.

The Barons plainly lacked the punch throughout both games and were weak when a strong offense was required. In the first inning with Brausen on third, Stewart started a half hunt, half swing grounder directly in the second baseman's hands as the Barons runner came running in from third to the plate in a hopeless attempt to score. He was easily slaughtered. Clark to Miller. Stewart then went around the bases to third and got caught in a chase on Goebel's grounder that was an easy putout for Killing.

The Crackers two runs in the first game came in the fourth and the eighth innings. In the fourth, Killing led off with a single and Barber followed suit. The next two men filed out to Sumpter Clark, but Ring singled and Killing scored. Miller flew out to Stuffy Stewart ending the inning.

Ring Hits in Pinch.
In the eighth Brady walked Killing, first man up. Barber sacrificed to second and Burke walked, sending Killing to third. He rested there while Danny Clark popped up to Robertson, but Ring again singled in the pinch and scored him. Burke

hit a terrific drive to the Southern league score board which missed clearing the wall by about two feet. He stopped at second but scored a moment later when Eddie Moore drove a grounder past Brausen, which was followed by another grounder between his legs from the bat of King. ### RED CAPS WILL PLAY LETTER CARRIERS

Arthur Almand announces that the colored letter carriers' team will play the red cap porters of the terminal station at Almand park Saturday.

This game will be the first of its kind played at Almand park and is put on at the request of many white friends of the two teams who claim that they play an unusually good game of ball.

The seating facilities at Almand park are splendid and one grandstand will be for white and the other the colored fans.

ANOTHER GAME FOR MONTGOMERY

Montgomery, Ala., July 18.—Alabama's capital city now has another football game scheduled for the fall season, according to Cliff Green, of the booking committee. Spring Hill and Marion Institute are the two institutions which will send their football warriors to clash here.

Other games on schedule include Auburn vs. Tulane; Auburn vs. Birmingham-Southern, and Alabama vs. Georgia.

was thrown out at third by Robertson, ending the inning.

The lone Barons tally of the first game came in the sixth inning. "Stuffy" Stewart led off with a single and went to second when Killing threw the ball away at first. Neun singled and Stewart scored. The next three men were turned down in order in easy putouts.

In the second game the Barons drew first blood. Clarke singled and advanced to third on two infield outs. He scored when Karr threw the ball to the grandstand on a wild pitch.

Karr's double and grounders by Brock and Ring that made Brausen look foolish on third accounted for the first Barons run. The winning run came in the seventh on Mohardt's triple and Brock's single after two men were down.

Constitution Team Downs Georgian Nine; Score 3-1

Milligan, Constitution's Star Hurler, Allows Only Three Hits and Has Georgian Batters at His Mercy.

The Atlanta Constitution baseball team, of the Press League, defeated the Georgian for the second time this season at Almand park, Wednesday afternoon, by a score of 3 to 1. The last time the Constitution team played it was beaten by the Journal nine by a score of 29 to 2, but yesterday afternoon the Constitution team came back with a real game.

Milligan, the star hurler on the Constitution team, was the star of the game, striking the Georgian but three hits, allowing only 11, and not walking a man. His control was perfect, but in the fourth inning the Georgian team secured two hits, and scored a run. "Red" Barron got on when he hit safely and then stole a couple of bases, and scored on a hit.

The Constitution team, scored one run in the second inning and two in the fifth. T. Atkinson, Wier and Flanders were responsible for the Constitution victory. Atkinson secured two hits while Wier and Flanders secured two each.

The Georgian made a total of 10 errors and those miscues, coupled with some timely hitting on the part of the Constitution, paved the way for a victory.

New York, July 18.—The cotton market was comparatively quiet today with July easier under a little scattering liquidation, while the new crop held generally steady on weather and crop news. October contracts sold up from 23.62 to 23.95 and closed at 23.73, with the general market closing barely steady net two points lower to 16 points higher.

The market opened steady at unchanged prices to a decline of 10 points owing to poor Liverpool cables, expectations of a heavy cotton crop report from the weather bureau and scattering liquidation. No July notices were reported but there was a little heavy liquidation which sent the price of that month off to 26.00 about the end of the morning or about 22 points net lower.

This had rather an unsettling effect on sentiment, but October and later deliveries firmed up shortly after the opening on the continued absence of rains in the southwest and the fact that too much rain was falling in eastern belt sections.

The weekly report of the weather bureau made a favorable impression, as expected but failed to inspire much selling in the face of unfavorable weather news for the day, an new crop months, at one time were 27 to 30 points net higher, with December selling at 23.44.

There was no special change in the general news and trading remained quiet, but this and other attributes of the market were reactions of several points lower. New crop months closed 18 to 22 points off from the best but July was shade steeper in the late trading and recovered most of its earlier loss.

Local traders seemed to fear that the wet weather in the eastern belt would stimulate boll weevil activities and lead to reports of insect damage within the next few days. The forenoon decline in July was accompanied by rumors that the United States Export stocks 247,860. Exports 13,321, making 4,733,118 this far this season.

New York, July 18.—Cotton quiet; middling 27.35.

HEDGE SELLING
LOWERS NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans, July 18.—While it was mainly a weather market today and prices were maintained at moderate net gains most of the time, the tone was largely bearish. The trading under what looked like an increase in hedge selling of contracts. July turned soft but the new crop months held steady. July closed 15 to 20.75 and appeared to be affected by the decline in the spot market, spots here being reduced 25 points to 26.50 for middling.

The early session brought a very steady market, showy weather in the eastern belt causing fear of continued increase in boll weevil activity. The continued drought in Texas was made much of. A little later there were many rumors over private wires of a much more favorable turn in the foreign political situation and the market went to its highest, October trading up to 23.24 cents, a point. Here the new crop months were 35 to 38 points above the level of yesterday's close.

Weekly crop reports from the government were considered fairly favorable for this time of year, but did not have much effect because of the drought talk coming from Texas and the forecast of continued dry weather for the rest of the last part of the session selling was persistent, although in moderate volume, and it gradually had its effect.

STOCK LETTER.

New York, July 18.—Trading was again slow today although sales increased a trifle over yesterday. There was the same firmness in the market as yesterday, but investors are still picking up dividend paying stocks especially the rails. The advance in expectation of favorable news within the next few days has caused a most optimistic feeling in the market circles. Some of the bulls are apparently taking hold of the feeling again and barring any extended considerably further. There was some profit-taking which caused a slight dip in the market, but there are buyers for stocks on all setbacks—Fenner & Beane.

COTTON LETTER.

New York, July 18.—(Special.)—The fact that the market has a little response to depressing factors but reflects so quickly anything suggesting another crop shortage is making a deep impression in some of the important quarters of the trade where it is interpreted as a sign that the cotton crop is not as good as it was last year. It is not an effort to replace these sales. It is not an effort to replace these sales. It is not an effort to replace these sales.

PLANS ARE DRAWN FOR NEW VIADUCT

Engineers Estimate Pryor-Central-Wall-Alabama Bridge to Cost Under Million.

Mayor Walter A. Sims made public Wednesday the tentative plans for the new viaduct project to bridge the railroad tracks of Wall street, Pryor street, and Central avenue. The plans were drawn by Spiker & Lose, architectural engineers, and estimate the improvement to cost between $239,800 and $553,500. The money would be raised by assessing benefited property owners.

The plans were made public shortly after the Fulton delegation had introduced the bill in the general assembly which would give the city authority to build new viaducts. They would provide new traffic arteries which, with Spring street viaduct, would practically solve Atlanta's cross town traffic problem for years to come, Mayor Sims said in making public the plans.

Approved By Council

Mayor Sims had recommended the development to council in his inaugural message and it had received the endorsement of council.

As proposed by the engineers, the new development would prove an important step in the direction of the municipal plaza, originally mapped out by Harrison Beckley and endorsed by all three Atlanta newspapers and practically every civic organization in Atlanta.

It embraces viaducts over Whitehall and the railroad tracks on Wall street from Central avenue to Whitehall and Peachtree street; over Pryor street from Edgewood to Mitchell, over Central avenue from the corner of Exchange place and Ivy street to Mitchell.

Wall and Alabama streets would be made two-level streets with an approach to the lower level of Wall street through a new street to be made from Kenn's alley and a new cut through to Hunter street. The present street levels would be graded down to provide sufficient headway for traffic under the viaducts, which would form a second deck for the streets.

Property Owners to Meet

Mayor Sims announced that he would call a meeting of property owners in the district affected by the viaduct project within the next ten days in order that the tentative plans may be explained to them in detail by the engineers and any objections may be voiced.

The preliminary survey and estimate was made at the expense of some of the property owners who will be benefited by building the viaduct. It is estimated to cost less than $1,000,000. The estimates of the engineers, taking several contingencies into consideration, ran from $239,800, as the minimum that may be expected, and $553,500, as the maximum that may be expected.

Loss Submits Report

The report of the engineers, as submitted by Robert G. Lose, explains the project as follows:

"We have made up a preliminary layout and estimate of Pryor street and Central avenue viaducts crossing the W. & A. railroad and Georgia railroad tracks. This study includes the viaducts and approaches on Pryor street and central avenue and the viaducts over Wall street and Alabama street connecting Peachtree street and Whitehall street with Pryor street and Central avenue, as well as a viaduct on the south side of W. & A. railroad tracks connecting Whitehall street with Pryor street. Also the change of grades necessary on Ivy street, Decatur street and Hunter street and the grading and widening of new streets.

"In this study it is proposed to lower the railroad tracks four feet, which will give a clear height above top of rail of 18 feet at Central avenue and 19 feet six inches at Pryor street. In planning the grades it was our desire to not exceed a four per cent grade. We found, however, that to keep a four per cent grade on Central avenue and maintain a minimum clearance of 18 feet above the rails there would be an eight-foot fill at Decatur street and Central avenue, which would give a grade exceeding four per cent on Decatur street between Ivy street and Collins street. It was thought better to increase the grade to the Central avenue approaches and reduce the fill at Decatur street. A maximum grade of five per cent was then established. In planning the grades on Pryor street a maximum grade of four per cent was established and worked out satisfactorily all around.

"Some plan is recommended to eliminate the double turn at Decatur street in going from Ivy street to Central avenue. This can be corrected by changing the position of Ivy street between Exchange place and Decatur street so as to have it intersect with Decatur street opposite Central avenue, or change Central avenue between Wall street and Decatur street to meet Ivy street at its present location.

"That part of the viaducts crossing over the railroad tracks is of steel construction encased in concrete. These viaducts were designed for a maximum span of forty feet to center of supports with provision made so that the supports can be shifted to any position as long as the distance between supports does not exceed forty feet.

"All the viaducts, other than the parts over the railroad tracks, are of reinforced concrete. The plans show a center line of columns down the

Plans and Profile Views of New Viaducts Proposed for Atlanta

Pictured above are the four main sections of the enormous new viaduct plan as drawn tentatively by Spiker & Lose and as the city of Atlanta will be authorized to build it when the charter amendment introduced Tuesday is passed. At the top is the plan and profile of the Pryor street viaduct, running from Hunter street to Decatur street, crossing the railroad tracks at Wall street. The profile at first glance is deceptive as it is drawn to a scale of one inch to 500 feet horizontally and one inch to only eight feet vertically. No grade is steeper than 4 per cent. The same scale is used in all the other drawings. The profile shows the present grade of the street and indicates the proposed lowering of the railroad tracks. The second drawing is the plan and profile of Central avenue, running from Hunter street to Decatur street. A 5 per cent grade from Decatur street to the viaduct is necessary in order to avoid a steeper grade elsewhere in the general plan, which is adjusted to the entire territory. The third drawing is the profile of the proposed two-level Wall street, which would be graded down lower on its first deck in order to give ample headway without throwing the other units of the plan out of balance by an unduly high viaduct. The two-deck street would extend from Central avenue to Peachtree and Whitehall, continuing to Broad, Forsyth and Spring streets as at present. The bottom drawing is the proposed profile of Alabama street, which also would be a two-level street. The viaduct as the main level would eliminate the abrupt grade now dropping from Whitehall down to Pryor. All the viaducts are planned without approaches like those which have long been a subject of controversy on Forsyth street viaduct.

center of the streets and an estimate is based on this arrangement. An ultimate study and estimate was made eliminating the center line of columns on Pryor street, Central avenue and Alabama street. In the latter study the girders across the street are eight inches deeper than that with the use of center line of columns, which reduces the head room under the viaducts by that much. The minimum head room, when using a center line of columns, is fourteen feet, and when eliminating the center line of columns is twelve feet six inches. The estimate covers the cost of the completed viaducts with paving holes, but does not include any items for changing street car tracks, gas connections, water connections, telephone connections, or any other public service, nor does it include the lowering of railroad tracks, or any

Children in School Last Year Need Not Apply for Tickets

Only children who did not attend the Atlanta public schools last term need apply this summer for special tickets to enter in September, it was stated by M. E. Coleman, in charge of school tickets, Wednesday.

The recent request of the department that all children contemplating entering school should apply for tickets immediately, has caused some confusion, he said. All pupils who attended school last year were given tickets at the close of school and need no further credentials for entrance, save in the case of out-of-town residents who must pay the regular fees.

Australian Ballot System Effective Here After Jan. 1

The Australian ballot system will be used in Fulton county in the first election after January 1, 1924, it was announced Wednesday, as the result of the recommendation of the July Fulton county grand jury. This is the second recommendation made by a Fulton jury and completes the necessary procedure to put this plan into effect.

A committee, representing the League of Women Voters, appeared before the grand jury Wednesday to urge this action. The league last year sponsored a bill in the legislature which called for the introduction of the Australian system whenever it was approved by two grand juries.

Faxon and McCarty Named on Georgia Education Board

Governor Clifford Walker Wednesday appointed J. H. Faxon, of Colquitt, and E. E. McCarty, of Early, as members of the state board of education, their terms to begin September 5, and extend for four years.

The governor also announced the appointment of T. J. Parks as solicitor of the city court of Ludowici, his term to expire January 1, 1925.

ANDREW ROBINSON NOT DRUNK, SAYS TURNER

A denial that Andrew Robinson, who was wounded as a result of an altercation with "Kid" Cunningham Tuesday night, was under the influence of liquor at the time of the shooting, was made Wednesday by T. S. Turner, of 552 Woodward avenue. Mr. Turner said that medical examiners at the Grady told him that they had found no traces of liquor when Robinson was brought there for medical attention.

Robinson was wounded in the thigh and in the side by bullets said to have been fired by Cunningham at the junction of Whitehall and McDowell streets. Cunningham has not been apprehended.

DISMUKE IS PLANNING TO RAID MANY STILLS

To conduct a series of raids on stills in the northern section of the state, Federal Prohibition Director Fred D. Dismuke and Agents A. C. Sovell, C. M. Forbes and Lon Abair left Atlanta Wednesday for north Georgia.

Within a period of ten days Dismuke's agents operating in Atlanta placed under arrest this month more than 100 persons from which they claim to have purchased whiskey.

property damage where the grades are changed, nor the cost of property condemned for the new streets and the widening of alleys.

"The estimate is also based on obtaining sufficient earth from the excavation along the railroad right of way to make the fill on the streets. Should this not be possible there should be added an additional item."

Inexpensive Method of Reducing Dangerous Swollen Veins at Home

Doctor's Recent Discovery, Also Heals Ulcers, Boils, Carbuncles, Abscesses and Open Sores in a Few Days.

The world progresses. Today ailments that took weeks to cure can now be cured in a few days. If you have varicose veins or bunions you can start this today to bring them back to normal size, and if you are wise you will do so.

Just get an original bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil at any dispensing pharmacist and apply it night and morning to the enlarged veins. It is very powerful and penetrating, and only a little is required.

After a few days' treatment the veins will begin to grow smaller and by regular use will soon reduce to normal.

Moone's Emerald Oil besides being one of the most powerful of antiseptics capable of destroying the most pernicious germs and the poisons caused by them, is also a marvelous healing agent.

One application for instance stops the itching of eczema, and a few applications causes the eruptions to dry up, scale off and completely disappear. It is equally as effective in relieving the itch, salt rheum, redness and inflammation of skin trouble.

People who want to reduce varicose veins, wens or goitre, or get rid of eczema, ulcers, boils, abscesses or piles in a few days should not hesitate to get a bottle at once. It is so powerful that a small bottle lasts a long time. Jacobs' Pharmacy can supply you.

Hostess to the Largest Woman's Club in the World

Mrs. J. T. Simmons is resident hostess of the largest woman's club in the world—the Atlanta Woman's club.

BY MARTHA GOODE ANDERSON

Atlanta will soon have claims to so many glories that it will be one of the seven wonders of the world. In addition to all of its other claims it can now put forth its ownership of the largest woman's club in the world, for the Atlanta Woman's club, with its 1,400 members and three fine buildings is so conceded, I am told. Mrs. T. J. Simmons is hostess for this wonderful club. The words "Southern Hospitality" have too long been associated with the south for anyone to ask "why a club hostess?" Mrs. Simmons has made the words take on new meaning in her office. She is who is the central pivot around which revolves all the social life of the club. She is who sees card tables, luncheon tables, banquet hall, committee rooms, light, heat and flowers are all in readiness when needed for the thousand and one things going on in that splendid center of woman's activity.

"Being club hostess," says Mrs. Simmons, "is about the most remarkable thing that ever happened to me. In the first place, the vocation has grown with the needs of the office. Being a good housekeeper is the first requisite. Possessing good humor is the foundation. It does not matter whether one is suddenly called upon to get ready a reception for 3,000 people or is asked to change every curtain in all of the twenty-five or more rooms in the main building in half an hour, one must be ready with no sense of personal relation whatever to the problem in hand. I contend that no one can do this who does not love people and enjoy them. I do, therefore nothing is ever any hardship to me, it makes no difference what the demand.

Mrs. Hunt Gives Tea for Visitors.

BEAUTY CHATS

By Edna K. Forbes

REJUVENATING BARLEY WATER.

A very famous French beauty once said that wrinkles belonged not to the aged but to the negligent, and should be left to them. She wanted off wrinkles by a liberal use of barley water which followed a cleansing wash with hot rain water and a little very oily soap. Barley water is made by boiling three ounces of pearl barley in one pint of water until the barley is soft so the gluten is thoroughly extracted. It should be boiled in a covered saucepan, or hot water added when it is taken from the heat in sufficient amount to make up the pint. The water is strained from the grain, cooled, and 30 drops of tincture of benzoin are added. It is wiped over the face with a tiny sponge or bit of absorbent cotton after the face has been washed and dried. It should be used night and morning. If you can afford it barley water baths are delicious. Three ounces of barley are thoroughly cooked in a little water until they are soft. The liquid is poured off and later added to the bath water, and the soft barley itself is put in a cheese cloth bag which is thrown into the bath water and squeezed with the hands until as much liquid as possible is squeezed out. I frequently mention complicated baths of this sort, for I find that many of my readers have the time and the inclination to follow these directions. Such baths are cleansing and beautifying, though personally I have never bothered with any except sea salt, home made bath salts or oatmeal soaks. The oatmeal baths being so quick and easy to prepare, Barley water baths are no more beneficial than oatmeal baths. They are cleansing and bleaching and tend to make the skin a little firmer. The stronger solution for the face does prevent wrinkles.

Dollie Madison—With dark brown eyes and golden brown hair, the most becoming color will be dark brown. Dark brown will bring out the eyes and throw the hair into relief—that is, show up its golden tints and make the contrast of eyes and hair more pronounced. Golden brown, yellow and beige will do this also. Blues and rose-pinks always look well on brunettes.

Tillie T. H.—Do not squeeze blackheads as you will hurt the skin. A formula for a blackhead powder will be mailed to you upon request and receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Twenty-two—Enlarged ankles are often caused by wearing high heels, or any other kind of heel that throws the foot out of its natural position. Young Mother—Remove the shafts of hair by combing with a fine tooth comb which is kept well soaked in vinegar. Kerosene is used to kill the active vermin. Peggy D. V.—A girl of 18, five feet, weight 110 pounds, is not overweight. Reader—If you cannot procure tea, white hazel is an excellent substitute. Tomorrow—Learning to Stand Well.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Forbes in care of the "Beauty Chats" department will be answered in these columns in their turn. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So if a personal or quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the question—The Editor.

Good Dumplings. To insure light, flaky steamed dumplings, a cloth should always be placed over the steamer before the lid is put on. It will prevent the steam from falling on the dumplings, causing them to be heavy.

COLGATE'S RIBBON DENTAL CREAM

Recent investigation by an independent national research institute shows that more Dentists recommend Colgate's than any other dentifrice.

This preference is even more pronounced than six years ago when a similar investigation revealed Colgate's to be "THE DENTISTS' DENTIFRICE."

Child-birth

Here is a wonderful message to all expectant mothers!

When the Little One arrives, you can have that moment more free from suffering than you have perhaps imagined. An eminent physician, expert in this science, has shown the way. It was he who first produced the great remedy "Mother's Friend." Mrs. C. J. Hartman, Scranton, Pa., says: "With my first two children I had a doctor and a nurse, and then they had to use instruments, but with my last two children I used Mother's Friend and had only a nurse; we had no time to get a doctor because I wasn't very sick—only about ten or fifteen minutes." Use "Mother's Friend" as our mothers and grandmothers did. Don't wait, start today, and meanwhile write to Bradford Regulator Co., B. A. 46, Atlanta, Ga., for a free illustrated book containing information every expectant mother should have. "Mother's Friend" is sold by all drug stores everywhere.

MANY LEGISLATORS AND WIVES WILL ATTEND BARBECUE

Representative Craig Arnold, of Lumpkin, announced Wednesday night that indications are that between 250 and 300 of the members of the general assembly and their wives would accept the invitation of Lumpkin county to attend the barbecue to be given at Dahlonega Saturday. Mr. Arnold was particularly anxious that every member be impressed with the hour at which the party will leave Atlanta. Automobiles will be provided and they will leave the Kimball House and the Ansley hotel promptly at 7 o'clock Saturday morning. The return trip in the evening will be broken by a stop at Gainesville, where supper will be provided, and the party will reach Atlanta again about 8:30 o'clock.

"Mystery Woman" Suffers Nervous Collapse at Grady

Viola Ward, "the woman of mystery," held by detectives in connection with the theft of valuable jewelry from Atlanta homes, Wednesday was in Grady hospital in a serious condition suffering from a nervous collapse she suffered late Tuesday night. The metal strain the woman has been under has caused her breakdown," according to doctors at the hospital, who stated severe grillings, to which she has been subjected, probably played an important part in causing her collapse. She has been questioned at length by detectives, who are seeking her alleged confederates.

PORT COMMISSION REPEAL ADVERSED

A bill, introduced by Representatives Clark and New, of Laurens county, to abolish the state port commission created in 1921, was adversely reported by general agriculture committee No. 1 of the house at a meeting Wednesday morning. This marks the first move in the state port fight at this session and is considered a victory for Savannah over Brunswick.

Representatives Atkinson and Ewe, of Chatham, Elders of Tattall, and Calhoun, of Putnam, with Gordon Sausy, president of the Municipal League of Georgia, appeared before the committee to argue against the abolition of the commission. Representative New and Representative Mann, of Glynn, argued in favor of abolishing the commission.

Representative New announced that he would file a minority report and he had the bill placed on the calendar of the house for the purpose of disagreeing with the report, when it was adversely reported. He stated that opponents of the commission would continue the fight against it to the bitter end.

The present commission is composed of the governor, commissioner of agriculture, secretary of state, W. D. Baker, of Atlanta, representing the farmers of the state, and Dr. C. H. Kirell, of Dublin, representing the Georgia Farmers' union.

The committee also set Friday for a special hearing on the bill of Representative Mann, of Glynn, which provides for a distillation test of gasoline.

PEACHTREE ROAD ANNEXATION PLAN VETOED BY MAYOR

The Peachtree road annexation proposal, killed Tuesday by Councilman Claude L. Ashley's refusal to call the charter revision committee into special session to consider it, was buried Wednesday for this year when Mayor Walter A. Sims vetoed the resolution of council making the proposal. Protests by a few citizens in the affected territory were said by the mayor to have attracted his veto. Councilman Ashley had stated that it is too near the end of the general assembly for the measure to be passed in legal form this year.

CHAPTER XXXVIII

A Malicious Outbreak

"Mimi, you shouldn't have let Virginia know that Morton was at that party last night," protested Gloria, when Mimi returned to the room. Virginia had rushed out, slamming the door behind her, and Gloria felt sure that she was in her room crying. "Well, she was so nasty to me," retorted Mimi, calmly. "She always is—always has been, for that matter. She treats me like a worm. The way she inferred that it was amazing Slater had asked me to her house party—she if Lorraine Slater wasn't just a poor girl before she married her millionaire! Virginia needn't be so high and mighty. She's always acted as if she owned the earth—I guess

All the world was a boudoir to Mimi.

she's finding out now that there's one person she can't order around. But I hope I didn't make trouble for you, Gloria—did you tell her that her husband was there with that pretty artist?" Gloria shook her head, thoughtfully.

ly. She felt that Virginia wouldn't so much mind Morton's going to the party if she thought that he went with her young cousin, a girl whom she had always ruled. But if she knew that he went with a girl who had achieved heights that Virginia could never attain, no matter how desirable she might feel that those heights were, she would be wretched over the matter.

"Well—" Mimi paused for a moment, vigorously brushing her bobbed hair. "Well, if Virginia Schuyler thinks that she can sit on me she's awfully mistaken. Why, I could tell her—oh, well, never mind! Hadn't you better get up?"

"I'm going to," replied Gloria slowly, sitting up on the edge of the bed and reaching around with her bare feet for her slippers. She wondered what it was that Mimi could tell Virginia.

She dressed for the motor trip almost mechanically, while Mimi, soon attired in the few articles of clothing that she wore, rushed about, packing Gloria's bag for her, replenishing the powder contained in her vanity case, doing all the little things that someone always did for Gloria.

"We'll have to stop at the railway station for my bags," she announced, as they walked down the corridor to the elevator. "I meant to tell Guy last night to get them on the way here, but he probably wouldn't have remembered if I had."

"But I thought that you'd left them at the hotel," protested Gloria. "No, I—I just left them at the station—nothing in them that I wanted," replied Mimi, but she flushed uncomfortably. Gloria began to suspect that Mimi had not registered at a hotel at all.

Guy was waiting for them with his car, and while they waited for Gloria's traveling bags to be stowed away in it, Mimi drew forth a powder puff and proceeded to touch up her complexion a bit. Gloria sighed, uncomfortably. All the world was a boudoir to Mimi! She wielded lipstick and eyebrow pencil quite openly in public, and Gloria who had supposed that make-up wasn't successful if it could be detected, was amazed at the way in which Mimi flouted the tools of the trade.

Mimi was in a malicious mood.

Gloria had paused at Virginia's room on the way to the elevator to say good-bye, and Virginia had ignored Mimi so pointedly that the girl's irritation vented itself on Gloria. Guy, being a man, was immune.

Gloria had paid her hotel bill on her way to the car. There was an extra charge because of Mimi's spending the night with her, but as Mimi had gone on to speak to Guy, she had not been present when Gloria paid it. Gloria wondered if she ought to speak to Mimi about it; she had been taught that one must always defray all financial obligations. She decided that Mimi would probably speak to her about it later, and that she would not mention it.

"I think it's all a pose, Gloria," Mimi remarked suddenly, and Gloria turned to her in surprise. "I mean this sophistication of yours. You never do anything that warrants it. You don't even smoke! You don't do any of the things that you'd be expected to—met men at night, for instance; why, I'll bet you never even accepted a pair of silk stockings from a man!"

"Certainly I never did!" declared Gloria, and then, seeing the maliciousness in Mimi's eyes, she hastily added, "Men have such bad taste in hose—they always select colors, instead of black."

Mimi shrugged her shoulders. "That's true; enough—but you can always change 'em," she observed. "Well, I'll bet you a dozen pairs of those new tete de negre ones that you'll be shocked 'tween you hear about the present I got yesterday."

"What was it?" demanded Gloria, and Guy took his attention from the traffic to listen.

"Oh, nothing—nothing but a little old imported negligee!" replied Mimi, nonchalantly.

Guy whistled softly and gave her a keen, appraising glance. Gloria flushed to the roots of her hair. So her suspicions had been right—it was because he was buying something for Mimi that Morton Phelps had been in that shop!

Tomorrow—Mimi's Confession.

2 MEN ARE HELD ON INDICTMENTS CHARGING BIGAMY

Two indictments, charging bigamy, were handed down Tuesday by the Fulton county grand jury—one against Calvin McCleod, young vocational student, accused of marrying the 13-year-old sister of his wife; the other against Lon Daley, said to be in jail at Covington, awaiting trial for his alleged marriage to an Eatonton girl while his first wife was alive and undivorced.

McCleod's case created a sensation in Atlanta a month ago, when he was taken into custody upon the story of Dora Carlton, who declared that he had forced her to marry him. The girl was a witness at the session of the grand jury.

The case of Lon Daley involves his alleged marriage in Atlanta January 23 to Miss Myrtle Sparks, of Eatonton, while his first wife, Mrs. Maggie M. Daley, was still living in Covington.

"Out of the Mouths of Babes"

BY M. E. G. A.

The other day my path led to one of Atlanta's most beautiful suburbs. It was one of those days where one felt the beauty and goodness of life, when the blue canopy of the sky seemed a cloak of loveliness spread over us to make us feel the comfort of protection. The trees and grass had never seemed more beautiful in the evening sun and I felt with the poet, "God's in this heaven, all's right with the world."

Suddenly a drenching shower came from a cloud, spotting the blue vault above, and apparently no "bigger" than a man's hand. I ran for shelter to a little pavilion beside the car tracks. No sooner had I taken my seat on the long, low bench placed for those who ride on street cars to sit on and wait, than there came dashing up under my shelter a miniature pony cart, one of those little low-wheeled basket carts drawn by a tiny Shetland pony. In the little yellow basket sat a brown-eyed woman and two charming children, round and chubby and adorable. The whole affair could easily have been placed on the bench beside me, passenger, pony and all, it was so tiny. "We've come in out of the rain," the woman explained, "the babies and the pony and I," she said.

"The rain will soon be over," I answered, by way of welcome. "Yes, but I do not want the babies drenched," she responded. "Whose babies are they?" I asked. She gave me the name of one of Atlanta's most prominent young matrons, a woman known far and wide for her kindness and her gaiety of spirit as well as for the vast wealth she controls.

All this time the eldest of these babies, a youngster about four years old, had been looking at me with eyes as blue as had been the sky now overcast. Instantly when I heard the name, I recalled a story I had heard of this little child and a memory of marvelous as his little face—as lovely. Some one had told me that this four-year-old baby was far more well versed in the scriptures than many an older person.

I asked the nurse, for so the brown-eyed woman declared herself to be, and then that tiny infant repeated for me, word for word, the 23rd Psalm, the 14th chapter of St. John and other familiar passages. Truly, I thought here is something for serious consideration. We teach little ones all the nonsense rhymes in Mother Goose and kindred books, and are filled with glee when the baby voice lisps such meaningless phrases as "Hey, diddle, diddle, the cat and the fiddle," etc. Why not teach the rosy little mouth to lip words of more import and sweeter dignity? To the little mind each is equally meaningless at that early age. Each is equally easily learned, for the mind is plastic and retains in photographic impression what older minds impress upon it.

The difference comes, however, in after years. From the depths of a subconscious impression, received without effort, is drawn inspiration, comfort and strength for future days.

I do not decry the nursery rhymes, for they, too, have their uses. They are the spirit of that "nonsense which now and then, is relished by the wisest men," and which, too, is often helpful and sustaining.

I am suggesting, though, that those trifled away in such fashion that only the "nonsense spirit" remains. We have in America, one or two notable examples of children, like Mrs. Stoner's, who began from her baby's earliest months to teach something really of value and sense. The result produced a perfectly normal child, who was far advanced in mental development over the children of her own age, and whose example might well be followed, at least, as an experiment which can only benefit all with whom it comes in contact.

By this time the rain and the little pony cart had gone away together; the street car was coming over the hill, the sun was out again and I was saying to myself, as I do to you, "Verily, out of the mouths of babes."

British Intervention In Ruhr Will Save Europe, Says Ross

England Must Act to Save Herself and Continent, States Publisher.

The British government meets again Thursday to consider Great Britain's reply to Germany's last reparations offer.

It will produce an important development regarding allied solidarity on French occupation of the Ruhr.

Sir Charles Ross, noted publisher of the London Outlook, has written an article giving heretofore undisclosed facts regarding the recent meeting of Lord Curzon and M. de St. Aulaire, French ambassador in London, which led up to the present step of the British government. After reviewing what took place at this meeting, Ross declares:

"Britain must act if she would save herself and Europe from starvation and slavery. It is safe to assume she will act and she will have Italy with her."

BY SIR CHARLES ROSS, BART. (Published by United News through arrangement with the Outlook.) London, July 18.—Only an informed public opinion can give the government strength and courage for the difficult task that lies before it. By lending themselves to the present step of conceding and obscuring the points at issue, the Daily Press is stultifying its justification for existence, as well as playing the French game. France has every thing to conceal, England nothing.

The questionnaire sent by Great Britain to France requested straightforward answers to plain questions. Germany on June 7 and made proposals for a settlement of the reparations question which the British government considered a basis for negotiation. The French rejected this view.

Since France continues to take measures which are rapidly reducing Europe from confusion to chaos, since the whole business and financial world here has at last convinced the politicians that France is dragging England down with Germany into the abyss.

WOMAN'S HEALTH RESTORED

Milwaukee, Wis.—"I feel that I ought to let you know about my case. I was ailing and could barely do my housework and washing I was so run-down, just from having one child. I took a lot of medicines and had doctors. Then I gave them all up and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I feel wonderful.

fully good now. I do every thing that comes along, and we all take your medicine as a tonic when we don't feel just so. I am thankful for what the Vegetable Compound has done for my health and for my family."

Mrs. MARY SAICHECK, 944 28th St., Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Letters like these testify to the value of the Vegetable Compound. These women speak from the fullness of their hearts. They describe as correctly as they can their conditions: First, those symptoms that affected them most conspicuously; and later the disappearance of those symptoms. They are sincere expressions of gratitude. For nearly fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been so praised by women.

No Man's Hand

BY HUGH MACNAIR KAHLER

Next Week, "Lilian"
By Arnold Bennett

"Yes, I was sort of excited. It was a big surprise to get it! Next I knew there was a shot, and I saw Corcoran... I'll over the stand. I could see that his mouth was hit. I looked around, but I couldn't see anybody. And then it struck me that I'd be blamed. I— I sort of lost my head. I could hear people coming, and I didn't dare run for it. And I slid under the settee just before somebody came in. I couldn't see who it was. Then I heard you. And that's all."

"Well, it's pretty thin, Rackham! What did you do with the gun?" Larsen's tone did not change as he asked the trick question. Rackham stared. "What gun?"

"Why, yours, of course."
"But I didn't have any."
"Well, if we can't find one it may help your story," Larsen began to put a faint faith in the boy's flimsy explanation. "If you did it the gun's got to be somewhere in the room. That's clear enough."

He turned to Bleeker. "Better telephone to headquarters, Mr. Bleeker, and tell 'em what's happened. Say I'm here."

Bleeker moved to the door. Larsen checked him. "Better telephone here. I'd rather not one left the room just yet."

He crossed to the small door Mrs. Bleeker had used, and looked it over the inside. He hesitated a moment at his glance moved to the group he approached in the doorway. They were approaching them.

There were two men in livery, a white-jacketed chauffeur and a neat maid. "You all had better come in and sit there, in the bow window, out of the way. Are there any other servants?"

"There's the chauffeur. But he's been in the garage since dinner. And there Hankinson—whom you sent upstairs to bring down Mrs. Bleeker."

"Why doesn't she come, then? Never mind. Anybody who tries to leave the room will be under suspicion, I want you."

Bleeker had been telephoning. "They are sending some men right up," he reported.

"Can you reach Mrs. Bleeker's room on your telephone?"

"Not unless some one is at the master instrument in the pantry."

"Never mind, then," Larsen frowned. Mrs. Bleeker's failure to respond to his summons heightened the vague suspicion forming in his mind. It was just possible that young Rackham was telling the truth, unlikely as it seemed.

In that case, and if no weapon were found in the library, it would be his duty to consider Carol Bleeker rather seriously. He strode carefully around the room, looking under the heavy furniture, on the chance of locating the weapon before his assistants arrived. It was just possible Rackham could have opened one of the bookcases and put it behind the volumes. No—they weren't real books. Those hollow shelves didn't come out as ordinary books did. He opened a case and tested the thing himself. He could not resist a glance at Bleeker as the counterfeit was exposed.

"I should be glad if you would confine your prying to the case, Mr. Larsen," said Bleeker. "My books are no one's affairs but my own."

"So I see," Larsen remarked. "But we've got to search carefully. If we don't find a gun, this boy's story may be true."

One of the servants spoke up. "Beg pardon, but didn't you say there was a gun in Mr. Corcoran's pocket?"

"It was there all the time—all the time!" Rackham spoke passionately. "I told you myself."

"I know you did. Don't worry. If you put the gun there I'll know it. If you didn't—I see you didn't! This gun hasn't been fired. The barrel's quite clean. That lets you out, Rackham—so far as this particular gun's concerned."

He turned as a step sounded behind him. Mrs. Bleeker came in, serenely self-controlled as ever. She seemed to look through and past Larsen.

"I sincerely trust I should be needed here," she said evenly.

"I'm sorry to inconvenience you so much, Mrs. Bleeker," Olaf Larsen kept his temper with an effort. "But a murder, you see, is rather important to all those involved."

"Surely that does not include me, then," she smiled faintly. "I can see nothing which would remotely involve me in this affair."

Larsen opened his eyes. "I meant merely that you were here—that Corcoran was your friend."

She made a slight gesture of dissent. "Scarcely that, I think. He was Mr. Bleeker's friend, possibly. Never mine."

"I see." It seemed to Larsen that if he had laid dead in Phil Corcoran's place and that voice had refused to admit the possibility of friendship in that same even fashion, the thing would have brought him back to life.

She must have had Corcoran! And she evidently did not see that the admission lent color to whatever suspicion might rest upon her.

"But you left the room just as I came up," he continued. "You must have entered it within a few seconds of the murder."

"I think so. I was in the hall when the shot was fired. I came in as quickly as I could, saw that Mr. Corcoran was hurt and help, and was on the point of coming for you and Mr. Bleeker when I met you in the hall."

"And then you went to your room, I suppose?"

"Why did you calmly leave us like that? Didn't you care enough to wait and find out?"

She smiled again. "I can understand your surprise. It impresses you as extraordinary that, given an opportunity to stare at death, I should not choose to avail myself of it—like the servants there! I prefer to avoid these interesting spectacles."

"You saw no one in this room when you entered?"

"No one except—Mr. Corcoran."

"And heard nothing?"

She hesitated. I fancied that I heard steps immediately after the shot. I could not be sure. But there was no one here when I came in."

til he comes." She took a chair and folded her hands.

Larsen continued his prowling. Unless he found a weapon somewhere in the room it would be his duty to charge this woman with willful murder.

By her own admission she was in the hall, with a clear view of the only door by which the murderer—if Rackham was innocent—could have escaped. That end of the room from which the shot had come contained no other break in its walls.

The hearth, with the massive mantel which seemed to be carved of stone, but really was a cheap casting, in imitation of an old English model, the rows of counterfeit books behind their glass doors—no one could have passed through these. And to reach the other doorway, giving on to the entrance hall, it would have been necessary to pass Rackham after the shot was fired.

Either the woman or Rackham; and so much was clear. Either one of them was protecting the person who had killed him. There was no other possible conclusion.

The police and the coroner arrived together, and his own examination was repeated. It was manifest, however, that the coroner must have been in the room with the plain-clothes men from Larsen's own bureau, all took the simplest theory.

Young Rackham had every reason for hating Corcoran; he had been found in hiding on the scene of the crime, with a thousand dollars which he admitted had been in Corcoran's possession that evening.

It was "open and shut" to the ordinary police view, Larsen admitted. The only question was the absence of any weapon.

"He might have chucked it out of the window, chief," whispered Mel.

The window's are still screened. All the way. He couldn't have done that."

"Then it's here somewhere. Do you hunt?"

"Go ahead," Larsen nodded. A painstaking search yielded no result. Larsen had begun to believe that Carol Bleeker must have done it, after all, when she laughed softly.

"I had always fancied that detectives must be persons of tremendous sagacity. And I have watched you ransacking the poor bookcases, when the obvious hiding place fairly calls out for your attention."

Larsen stared. He glanced about him. A log dropped in the hearth with a soft, thudding sound. He whistled.

"The fireplace!"

He seized a poker and rummaged carefully in the ashes and centers of the wide hearth. A chinking sound sent his pulses skipping. Very gingerly he dragged out what was left of a revolver of the old type, its wooden grip charred away, its metal discolored by the heat.

"I'm afraid that does for you, Rackham's," he said. "I guess our night's work's over, boys. Take him along. Are you satisfied, Doctor Bliss?"

Rackham suddenly found his voice. "She did it!" She did it herself!" he declared. "She knew the gun was there because she'd thrown it there! She's putting it on me—"

"Don't be a blackguard as well as a fool, Rackham," said Larsen. His own early suspicions rose to shame him now. "Take him along."

Larsen turned to the woman, and my thanks," he said.

"She looked at him steadily for a moment. "I'm not sure that I deserve either," she turned and left him to wonder that parting word.

Larsen found Charlotte and Enfield, the third member of the "syndicate" together and told them of the events.

"I thought you'd know better than that, Olaf," Charlotte cried. "After our talk with Bobby I counted on you to have some ordinary discrimination."

Larsen patiently, knowing that the further her enthusiasm carried her the easier it would be for him to persuade her that she was overbly in her conclusions.

"My dear Charlotte, I absolutely agree with you," he said at length. "The only trouble is that Bobby was there—hiding! He admits that there was no one else in the room! He stood where, if his story's true, he couldn't have helped seeing the murderer—and yet he admits that he didn't see anybody. It's simply a physical impossibility that he didn't do it! I was as anxious as you are to find him innocent, but it just couldn't be done on his own story."

"Which proves that his story's probably true, if you can reason at all," she retorted. "If he were lying, wouldn't he have said he'd been standing somewhere else? Wouldn't he have invented hearing a door open—steps—something suspicious, at least? Even a half-wit would have done that much!"

"But his story can't be true; that's the trouble. It contradicts the plain facts—"

"Oh, facts, again! How do you know which are facts and which are only good imitations?"

The word struck a queerly reminiscent chord.

Imitations! Nearly everything in Bleeker's library was just that. It came to Olaf Larsen that perhaps he had been fooled by counterfeit facts, after detecting counterfeit books, synthetic stone, artificially antique furniture and Oriental rugs from this side of the ocean.

"But, hang it, Charlotte—you weren't there, and I was! I saw—" "Well, tell me just what you saw! Give me the unimportant facts, as you call 'em. I can imagine the important ones."

He told the story again simply, aided by a question or two from the girl. She looked thoughtful.

"Well, I think the woman did it, on your version," Charlotte declared. "She sounds like the right type to do a thing like that, she had the chance, and it was she who knew where the gun was hidden! Those facts certainly look better than yours, Olaf."

"They would, except for one thing," he admitted. "There were powder burns on Corcoran's face. The gun couldn't have been more than a foot or so from his face when it was fired. Now, on Rackham's own story he was between Corcoran and the door. He was counting the money when the shot was fired, but nobody could have passed around him, killed Corcoran and got back to the door without his knowing it. The thing's absurd. So, if you're right, Rackham is deliberately taking suspicion to shield the woman, and that's hardly thinkable."

"It's more thinkable than your theory, at any rate," she retorted. "Rackham's exactly the sort of idiot to do such an absurd thing. He stole for Corcoran, didn't he? Well, a sweet-hearted fool who'd do that would do the other thing, too! That's my working theory, anyway, till I find something better."

Enfield spoke calmly: "There's nothing to be gained from getting excited now, Charlotte. Olaf knows the facts, and we don't. We'll get the story from Rackham in the morning, and perhaps he'll tell us more than he told Olaf. Anyway, we're in the dark."

"We're not going to stay there," she declared. "That boy's been persecuted enough. I'm going to see this through if it—"

"I'll say this, Charlotte. There won't be any question of anything more serious than manslaughter," Larsen spoke quickly. "I believe he didn't come there to do any killing."

"It's going to be a question of acquittal," she said indignantly. "I know he didn't do it. I believe that frozen woman did it! And I'll know about that after I've seen her."
